The student exercises leadership in school or outside of school. He/she works to be a positive influence on his/her peers and community.	Students has led in at least one area, perhaps temporarily, such as chairing a committee in an organization. Student's documented activities demonstrate dependability and responsibility. He/she is a positive influence on others and contributes to the well- being of the school or community.	He/she is dependable and responsible, but hesitates to demonstrate initiative or contribute ideas. The documented activities show dependability and responsibility, but lack a demonstration of initiative.	The student has not documented any leadership role; formal or informal.
II. Service
4	3	2	1
The student volunteers for service, both in organized activities and in informal situations on multiple occasions or in a regular fashion. He/she demonstrates courtesy, respect, dependability, and enthusiasm. He/she works well with others and derives genuine satisfaction from serving others.	The student helps with serving others, but doesn't have a direct impact (helping out with a one-time event, for example). He/she generally demonstrates courtesy, respect, dependability, and enthusiasm.	The student renders limited service to others. He/she may be undependable at times. The student is generally more motivated by personal gain than by a willing heart.	The student has not documented any service hours; formal or informal.
III. Character
4	3	2	1
The student demonstrates character in the following six qualities: respect, responsibility, fairness, trustworthiness, caring and citizenship. The student upholds the highest standards of honesty and is reliable. He/she shows high standards for character both inside and outside of the classroom.	The student more often than not demonstrates the six qualities of character and generally makes choices that reflect these standards for morality, ethics, and respect for authority. He/she is truthful, cooperative, courteous, and respectful.	The student understands the qualities of character and in guided/supervised situation will make choices that reflect high standards. His/her behavior at school, work, church, or home may not be consistent with behavior in other circumstances.	The student's behavior, attitudes, and choices reflect negative character traits. He/she shows little regard for authority or for principles of morality and ethics, and is a negative influence on his/her peers.

IV. Personal Statement
4	3	2	1
Thoughtful, succinct, and adds to overall impression of the student. Free of convention errors. Neatly typed.	Clearly and neatly written. Gives helpful information, but there are two or three conventions errors.	Clearly written, but tends to repeat, rather than add additional information or insight.	Does not add to the overall impression of the student. Hastily put together.
